New Jersey's soon-to-be tallest tower is also finally gearing up for its debut as an enormous residential building, with its 781 condos slated to hit the market sometime this fall. (The Marketing Directors is handling those.) The building, which is developed by China Overseas America and designed by Perkins Eastman, has been in the works for some time; in addition to all those apartments, the 79-story tower will also bring street-level improvements like a 7,000-square-foot public plaza and more retail. Apartments will be a mix of studios to three-bedroom units, though pricing has yet to be revealed.
